

Graduate School of International Studies

Major:

- International Business (MBA)
- International Trade (MA)
- NGO Studies (MA)
- International Development and Cooperation (MA)

Introduction

Overview

The Graduate School of International Studies at Ajou University was established in 1996 as a pioneer of professional studies programs in Korea. The founding motivation of Ajou GSIS was to meet the growing global demand for international academic institutes. At present, the Ajou GSIS has over 400 alumni in more than 55 countries worldwide, who are working at government agencies and global enterprises and playing important roles in their respective positions.

Ajou GSIS encourages you to get the very best out of your time and talents as the potential leaders of the coming world. We are educating future leaders for an increasingly complex global society in both professional and academic institutions to promote mutual understanding, peace, and prosperity, both regionally and globally. You will join a diverse student community from different parts of Korea as well as from more than 30 different countries. You will have an interdisciplinary focus that will help you develop your communication, technology, decision making, and teamwork skills as you prepare for a career in international fields. Currently, GSIS offers four majors, in International Business, International Trade, NGO studies and International Development and Cooperation.

Goal of Education

The purpose of the GSIS is to develop international experts with global perspective and information so that they can enhance international communication and cooperation in a rapidly changing world of politics, economy, culture, technology, and other critical areas.